Where should a laptop be stored if you don't have a security cable?

You may not own a security cable yet, in the interim, it's a wise decision to store your laptop in a place that's out of view. Think about it this way - if a person looked in your window or walked into a room, they should not be able to spot the laptop when it is stored. This doesn't need to be an extensive ordeal either.

Should you stack laptops on each other?

However, stacking laptops on each other is a poor choice for a multitude of reasons. First, the weight of the laptop pressing down on the laptops beneath it could damage delicate components of the laptops being sandwiched beneath it. Secondly, if the pile of laptops is too high, they are subject to falling and becoming damaged.
