Did SunPower delist its stock on the NASDAQ?

RICHMOND, Calif., Aug. 12, 2024 /PRNewswire/ -- SunPower Corp. (the "Company" or "SunPower"), a leading residential solar technology and energy services provider, today announced that the Company received a notice from the Nasdaq Stock Market LLC ("Nasdaq") that it has determined to delist the Company's common stock on Nasdaq.

Is SunPower solar going out of business?

The latest solar giant to run into struggles is SunPower Solar, one of CNET's picks for best national solar companies. The company is now filing for Chapter 11 bankruptcy and selling most of its assets in an organization-wide wind down, according to a recent statement.

Why did SunPower get a layoff?

In the company's WARN notice, it attributed the layoffs to "recent financial circumstances." "SunPower is working as hard as possible to pursue a long-term solution for the Company in the coming weeks in order to avoid certain of such layoffs," the company said.

Why did SunPower collapse?

The collapse this week came after SunPower told dealers that it was halting new leases, installations and shipments. Guggenheim analysts said the announcement likely marks the end of SunPower as an operating business. Workers install solar panels during a SunPower installation on a home in Napa, California, US, on Monday, July 17, 2023.

What will happen with existing solar leases & PPAs after ceased operations?

It still remains unclear what will happen with existing solar leases and PPAs after those operations were ceased, or how the recent layoffs might affect service for SunPower customers in the Bay Area. CNET has reached out to SunPower for comment.

What happened to SunPower?

SunPower recently ceased solar leasing and power purchase agreement operations in July. The change took effect immediately after the announcement. Reuters was first to report on the end of SunPower's leasing and PPAs after letters SunPower sent to dealers emerged in investment notes (PDF), downgrading the company's stock.
